Faculty Member, Political Studies
Lecturer, Specializing in Global Studies

The College of Arts and Science invites applications from qualified individuals for a one year full time, limited term Lecturer with a specialization in Global Studies in the Department of Political Studies. The successful candidate will be required to: teach approximately 15-18 credit units, with a mix of campus and distance (online) teaching; lead development of online materials for the Global Studies certificate; lead promotion of the Global Studies certificate; and undertake relevant administrative activities, including meetings and committee work.

The core of the Department consists of nine tenured/tenure-track faculty members, with additional colleagues in the affiliated St. Thomas More College. We offer undergraduate degree programs in Political Studies, International Studies, and Aboriginal Public Administration, as well as certificate programs in Indigenous Governance and Politics and Global Studies, and are centrally involved in various interdisciplinary programs across campus. We have an MA program in Political Studies. Our faculty members are also involved as graduate thesis supervisors and thesis committee members in Interdisciplinary Studies. Further information about the Department can be found at <http://artsandscience.usask.ca/politicalstudies>.

The College of Arts & Science offers a dynamic combination of programs in the sciences, social sciences, humanities, and fine arts. There are over 10,000 students in the College and 295 faculty, including 12 Canada Research Chairs. The College emphasizes student and faculty research, interdisciplinary programs, community outreach and international opportunities.

The University of Saskatchewan's main campus is situated on Treaty 6 Territory and the Homeland of the Métis. The University of Saskatchewan is located in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, a city with a diverse and thriving economic base, a vibrant arts community and a full range of leisure opportunities. The University has a reputation for excellence in teaching, research and scholarly activities and offers a full range of undergraduate, graduate, and professional programs to a student population of over 24,000.

Qualifications

Candidates must hold a completed Ph.D. in Political Science or International Relations and have a research and teaching specialization in the area of global studies and governance. We are seeking a collaborative-minded teacher-scholar who can contribute to the department's broad thematic area of Governance in a Global Era by teaching in and promoting the department's Global Studies certificate and other programs. As online course development and teaching are core to this position, the successful candidate must have demonstrated effective online teaching skills and experience in developing online classes. The successful candidate also requires a strong background in experiential teaching and learning, effective interpersonal and communication skills, and demonstrated experience organizing student outreach activities.
