COURSE 1— FRANCE, 1934-1940: THE PERILOUS PATH TO THE VEXACIOUS VICHY RÉGIME

Modern European History

On June 17, 1940, Marshall Pétain addressed the French nation on why it had become essential to ask Germany for an armistice; the very next day, General deGaulle, speaking over BBC radio, completely contradicted Pétain, explaining that while France had been defeated, it was not the time for surrender, but the time instead to pick up the broken sword.

This class, which is the first of two courses on the French Résistance, will examine not only what the Vichy Government that Pétain soon established really meant, but also why it increasingly came to be resisted, for at root Vichy was an overthrow of the Third Republic, and issued forth from a hatred that had long been harbored by army commanders and politicians.

Vichy, for some time, deceived many; it is crucial to see why and how, for only in understanding that does the formation of the French Résistance in response truly make sense.

COURSE 2 – FROM ARISTOTLE TO THE ARENA: ANIMALS IN THE GREEK AND ROMAN WORLD

History/Classics

Animals are an important part of our lives today, and the same was true thousands of years ago in the days of the Greeks and Romans. From pets to farm animals to game animals and hunting dogs, animals were everywhere in the ancient world, and they played a crucial role not only in the lives of individuals, but also in the structure of society as a whole.

This course will explore the social dimensions of how people interacted with animals in numerous areas of life, including at home (e.g., pets, livestock, etc.), in social settings (e.g., animals in the arena), and at war (e.g., cavalry horses, war elephants).

We’ll attempt to answer challenging questions, such as how people could eagerly cheer for the deaths of exotic animals in the arena in the same society where bereaved men and women erected touching funerary monuments for their deceased pets.

Instructor: Kyle McLeister, B.A. (Hon.), M.A. PhD, Lecturer without term, Department of History, College of Arts & Science

COURSE 3 – GODDESSES OF INDIA

Indian Mythology

This course is an introduction to the Goddesses of India. We will begin with the earliest Sanskrit traditions of the Rgveda, learning about the millenia-old traditions of the divine feminine. Through the lively divine dramas of the Puranas, we will see stories of fierce and gentle divinities, in both independent and married depictions. Finally, we will learn about contemporary temple and ritual culture, to understand the important regionally-based and pan-Indian forms of the goddess-centred branches of Hinduism.

Each week, we will discover the stories, ritual traditions, and philosophies of these important traditions, and discuss the relationship between the divine feminine and human women.

Lectures will include a mixture of selections from religious literature, photographs and maps of sacred sites, sacred art, and ethnographic accounts of Hindu worship.

COURSE 4— THE ANTHROPOLOGY OF PERFORMANCE

Anthropology

What do 15th Century French mimes, Elvis, and Lady Gaga all have in common?

Well, other than memorable costumes and great hair, perhaps nothing - but anthropologists who study performance, drama, and theatre suggest that studying art and culture tells us a great deal about the social, political, and economic processes affecting our world.

This course will study aspects of drama such as comedy, music, and film and ask questions like, 'what is at stake politically when art imitates life?'

Oh, and there may just be some clowns who guest lecture.

COURSE 5 — THE STORY OF MUSEUMS: THE GRITTY HISTORY BEHIND THE GLORY

History/History of Material Culture/Art History

Museums have been making the headlines lately. These venerable institutions, which I love, have found themselves at the centre of a storm of negative attention. The recent press and opinion pieces have been more critical than ever before as public consciousness is being drawn to the practices, attitudes, and finances that directed the collecting of world culture and heritage. As a historian, it’s important to me not only to understand the history behind the objects in museums, but the museums themselves.

This class will explore how these institutions of learning were established, presented, and used by collectors and the public. Were the virtues of knowledge, curiosity, and wonder used to justify the removal of cultural goods and heritage? Who directed the narrative of their presentation?

We will tackle these difficult questions and discover how these institutions can move forward to responsibly and accurately tell the wonderful stories of world culture we believe they should tell.
