COURSE 1— READING POETRY

English Literature

In this course we will read and discuss poetry from diverse periods, cultures, and authors. Students will learn—or perhaps refresh their memories about—how to identify various poetic forms, techniques, and devices in our readings.

Our goals in undertaking this endeavour are two:

First, having a technical understanding of how a poem’s ideas are expressed is crucial not just to interpreting what a poem means, but also to appreciating what a poem is as a work of literary art. (Or as Archibald MacLeish famously put it, “A poem must not mean / but be.”)

Second, and perhaps more importantly, knowing how poetry works from a technical point of view makes it much less daunting to read, and indeed can make reading it downright enjoyable!

Instructor: Dr. Kevin Flynn, B.A., M.A., PhD, Faculty Member, Department of English, College of Arts & Science

Dates: Mondays, September 13, 2021 to November 8, 2021

NOTE: THERE WILL BE NO CLASS ON MONDAY, OCTOBER 11 – THANKSGIVING DAY

Time: 1:30–3:30 pm

Place: SSCL Online

Class Size: No Limit
COURSE 2 – ANCIENT MYTHOLOGIES: HISTORICAL AND CULTURAL ASPECTS

Classics

A myth is just a story, but some stories resonate with, or catch the imagination & spirit of, a group of people. These resonating stories we call myths. I often wonder why a particular myth is taken up by a society. In this class, I want to examine a selection of myths in their historical and cultural contexts.

In some cases, these myths appear to explain or justify certain religious practices. These myths tell the members of the society why they do certain things. In other cases, myths appear to simply reinforce social values. These myths tell members of the social group how they ought to behave.

I will examine the myths of three groups: Mesopotamian, Greek, and Roman. Part of the material will be explaining the proper historical and cultural context of the myth and part will be explaining the myth itself.

Instructor: Stephen Cavan, M.A., Sessional Lecturer, College of Engineering

Dates: Tuesdays, September 14, 2021 to November 2, 2021

Time: 1:30–3:30 pm

Place: SSCL Online

Class Size: No Limit

COURSE 4 — THE STORIES BONE TELLS: AN INTRODUCTION TO BIOARCHAEOLOGY, OSTEOLOGY, AND PALEOPATHOLOGY

Archaeology

Bone provides not only the scaffolding for our bodies, but also a wealth of information on our identity, health, and activities. Bioarchaeologists study human bone excavated from archaeological sites; their work has been integral in informing our knowledge of past individual and population health, ancient lifestyles, and even compassion and care among our Hominin ancestors. New technology has allowed for further insight into disease, as well as for the revision of some past misconceptions.

This course will begin with an overview of bone function and the basics of what one can learn from skeletal remains. From there, we will move into health indicators, both at the individual and population levels. We will then embark on a study of disease, both chronic and acute, including some of the newer insights provided by DNA technology. Illustrative case studies featuring famous, infamous, and ‘ordinary’ figures from the past will be introduced each week. We’ll examine everything from the lead levels of the Franklin Expedition members to the bone effects of knee osteoarthritis.

Ultimately, bioarchaeology provides a connection with those on whose shoulders we stand and allows us to learn from their unspoken stories.

Instructor: Maryann Scott, B.A., M.A., Sessional Lecturer, Department of Archaeology and Anthropology, College of Arts & Science

Dates: Thursdays, September 16, 2021 to November 4, 2021

Time: 9:30–11:30 am

Place: SSCL Online

Class Size: No Limit

The origin, content, and rights associated with Aboriginal title will be explained as will the influence of English Property Law on the development of Canadian Property Law.

Specific property law topics of finding, gifts, fixtures, bailment, expropriations, and trespass will be discussed.

Instructor: Patricia L. Farnese, B.A.(Hons.), LLB., LLM, Associate Professor, College of Law, Member Law Society of Saskatchewan, Member, Canadian Agricultural Review Tribunal
