IN-PERSON COURSES, HYBRID COURSES, ONLINE ONLY COURSES

In the 2023 Spring Term, SSCL will be offering nine courses offered in different modes: In-Person, Hybrid, and Online Only.

In-Person Courses are offered only on campus in Room 202 Arts Building. Registration for these courses is limited to 64, so “first come; first served”.

The following courses are offered only In-Person:

- Course 3: A Passionate Look at Percussion Instruments and Their History
- Course 5: Greek Historians

Hybrid Courses are offered both on campus and online. The on-campus mode is offered in Room 202 Arts Building and the online mode is offered through ZOOM.

When you register for a Hybrid Course, you are registering for one mode of the course only. MAKE CERTAIN that you specify which mode you select. If you select on-campus and you intend to take the course online, you will not be able to do so; likewise, if you select online and you intend to take the course on-campus, you will not be able to do so.

The following courses are offered in Hybrid mode:

- Course 1: Living in a Secular Age: Exploring Religion Today
- Course 2: Stalin, 1941-1953: From Debacle to Dubious Dominance
- Course 4: What Is Islam?
- Course 7: The Psychology of Dying, Grief and Bereavement.
IN-PERSON COURSES, HYBRID COURSES, ONLINE ONLY COURSES (CONTINUED)

For hybrid online participants:

The hybrid experience is not an exact duplication of either the in-person or online class format.

The online course participants will not be able to ask questions verbally but will need to type into the Q&A feature.

At times, online participants may not see the instructor if he or she moves out of the view of the camera but will still be able to hear them.

At times, online participants may not see the writing on the blackboard depending on the lighting.

The sound quality for hybrid online participants may not be as sharp as it would be for an online only course.

The video camera in the room will be capturing the front of the classroom including the presenter, blackboard, and screen.

If the presenter is using the Screen Share the classroom view might be very small, depending on the online participant’s computer set-up. If the online participant has two computer screens, they will be able to switch from PowerPoint to the presenter and back as they prefer.

For hybrid in-person participants:

In-person clients need to be aware that the presenter can zoom the classroom camera in or out. The view may include the class attendees in the first couple of rows. If someone does not want to be part of the view, they will need to sit in the back of the room.

Online Only Courses are offered only online. There is no registration limit for online courses.

The following courses are offered only online:

- Course 6: The Psychology of Living a Good Life
COURSE 1a—LIVING IN A SECULAR AGE: EXPLORING RELIGION TODAY

RELIGIOUS STUDIES

Why was it impossible not to believe in God in 1500 while today belief in God is one option among many and, for a growing number of people, not the default option? With this question, Charles Taylor begins his magisterial study of the place of religion in contemporary society, A Secular Age (2007).

In this class we will follow Taylor to investigate how we have come to inhabit a secular age. We will ask: what does secularity have to do with the rise of modern science? Were human beings destined to shrug off their religious trappings? Is secularity implicit within the history of Christianity itself? What does it mean to ‘believe’ or ‘disbelieve’ in an age of religious pluralism?

Participants are welcome to read along in Taylor’s book but the presentations will be entirely accessible to those with no knowledge of Taylor’s work.

COURSE 2a — STALIN, PART IV: 1941-1953: FROM DEBACLE TO DUBIOUS DOMINANCE

HISTORY

This course will begin with the enormity of the devastation that engulfed Russia with the Nazi advance on Moscow in the latter part of 1941, before turning to how Stalin first reversed the military peril at Moscow, then Stalingrad, then Kursk, before doing the same diplomatically at Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam.

The course will then look to explain how Stalin, at the pinnacle of his power in 1945, as the head of both a massive military, and the entire Soviet Bloc of conquered and Communized countries, not only misread the resolve of the United States, but then underestimated the resistance of his erstwhile allies at home, who refused to return to the time of the purges.

Instructor: Dr. Clay Burlingham, B.A., M.A., PhD, Sessional Instructor, Department of History, University of Saskatchewan

COURSE 3 - A PASSIONATE LOOK AT PERCUSSION INSTRUMENTS AND THEIR HISTORY

MUSIC

From the banging and scraping of rocks in prehistoric times, to the refined craft of the modern orchestral percussionist, humans have been making music on percussion instruments throughout recorded history.

This course will trace the history of the percussion instruments from some of their earliest known origins, giving specific attention to the development of orchestral percussion instruments.

We will see how composers were inspired by the vibrant sounds and colours of the percussion instruments, and listen to performances by some of the world’s finest musicians.

This history will come to life with live demonstrations and opportunities to see and sample the instruments brought to class.

Instructor:  Darrel Bueckert, Applied Percussion Instructor and Sessional Lecturer, Department of Music, University of Saskatchewan

Dates:  Tuesdays, March 14, 2023, to May 2, 2023

Time:  9:30–11:30 am

Place:  202 Arts Building ONLY

Class Size:  64
COURSE 4a – WHAT IS ISLAM?

HISTORY, SOCIOLOGY, RELIGION

This course provides factual evidence for participants with little or no prior knowledge of Islam and Muslims, thus enabling them to form their own educated opinion on the religion and its people. Throughout the course, we will explore the varying interpretations of Islam’s foundational ideas by its followers and present them in a balanced interpretation based on their historical conditions. Views of non-Sunni communities such as the Twelver Shi’is and the Isma’ilis are included to show the diversities within the Islamic tradition.

In so doing, we will avoid broad generalizations about Muslim beliefs and practices and postulate or construct the trans-historical and immutable essence of the Islamic religion. We will include controversial and emotionally charged topics, such as the status of women in Islam, the often-negative portrayal of the Prophet Muhammad in Western media, the Crusades, the impacts of European colonialism, Islamic political movements, the possibility and viability of so-called "liberal Islam," and the current debates on state-building in the Middle East.

Instructor: Dr. Fachrizal Halim, B.A., M.A., M.A., PhD Islamic Studies, Sessional Instructor, St. Thomas More College, University of Saskatchewan

Dates: Tuesdays, March 14, 2023, to May 2, 2023

COURSE 5 – THE PSYCHOLOGY OF LIVING A GOOD LIFE

PSYCHOLOGY

Everyone wants to be happy, but what does psychology say about living a good life?

This course will explore the theory and research surrounding the idea of a good life, including topics such as stress and coping, positive psychology, suffering, wisdom, human thriving and resilience, valued living, virtues, culture, and happiness.

This course will include lectures as well as experiential learning activities, and will provide concrete suggestion for how learners can incorporate psychological knowledge into their own daily lives.

Instructor: Dr. Jorden Cummings, PhD Clinical Psychology, Professor of Psychology, University of Saskatchewan

Dates: Wednesdays, March 15, 2023, to May 3, 2023

Time: 9:30–11:30 am

Place: ONLINE ONLY

Class Size: NO LIMIT
COURSE 6a – GRIEF AND MOURNING AS WE AGE

PSYCHOLOGY

Have you ever heard of a “death café”? this course will not only introduce you to this concept but will also focus on the psychological issues relevant to dealing with dying and the death of loved ones.

Topics will include societal attitudes to dying and death, cultural differences in dying and death rituals, coping with dying, handling loss and grief, memorialization and funerals, medical assistance in dying, suicide, and life-threatening behavior.

The underlying philosophy for this class comes from the Statements on Death, Dying, and Bereavement (1994) of the International Work Group on Death, Dying and Bereavement, that stated: “Death, dying and bereavement are fundamental and pervasive aspects of the human experience. Individuals and societies can only achieve fullness of living by understanding and appreciating these realities.

The absence of such understanding and appreciation may result in unnecessary suffering, loss of dignity, alienation and diminished quality of living. Therefore, education about death, dying and bereavement is an essential component of the educational process at all levels, both formal and informal.”

Topics will be introduced always with time for group discussion, in the understanding that while the instructor knows theories and research, the students are the real experts and their knowledge is valued. Discussion of the topics is vital to learning.

COURSE 7 – GREEK HISTORIANS

CLASSICS

History began with the Greeks. Or at least, the Western tradition of the writing of history began with them; after all, it was the Greeks who gave us the term “history” - literally meaning “inquiries”. In the original Greek, it served as the title of Herodotus’ account of the Persian Wars, a work which earned him the nickname “the Father of History”. But not everyone agreed with Herodotus’ approach. Most strikingly, his immediate successor, Thucydides emphatically rejected his methodology and proposed an alternative in its place. Nor did the debate end there - historians throughout the Classical era regularly proposed alternative viewpoints regarding the best approach to writing history, building upon or rejecting their predecessors’ methodologies.

We will trace the development of historical writing in the ancient world, exploring the many different approaches that were employed by Greek historians. We’ll examine not only the methodologies employed by individual authors, but also the connections between them - both in terms of how they borrowed from their predecessors’ approaches and how they rebelled against them. By analyzing Greek historical writings, we’ll have the opportunity to explore questions about the purpose of history more broadly, including about how we practice it today.

Instructor: Dr. Kyle McLeister, B.A., M.A., PhD, Lecturer Without Term in History and Political Studies, University of Saskatchewan

Dates: Thursdays, March 16, 2023, to May 4, 2023

COURSE 8 - FROM PAPER MONEY TO POSTERS: PRINTMAKING – THE TECHNIQUES AND HISTORY OF A VISUAL AND INFORMATION REVOLUTION

ART HISTORY

Printmaking has been the heart of information and imagery dissemination ever since it was introduced, yet too often current understanding of the history of printmaking and the techniques used have been degraded by the limited education of viewers to the varied techniques that exist under the umbrella term of ‘printmaking’.

Printmaking as a medium has been used for printing both text and images, and through this, brought about an information revolution through the ease of dissemination of ideas.

Printmaking techniques allowed for greater ease for the creation and stabilization of paper money, establishment and installation of political systems and regimes though visual and social pressure as well printmaking was responsible for standardization of various vernacular languages. Historically visual printmaking held a prominent position amongst the other ‘high arts’, but this position as a visual medium was to a certain extent lost with the advent of photography.

The goal of this course is to better understand the techniques used for the creation of printed material, the purposes for which printed material has been used by looking at historical context, and the production of and dissemination of printed materials and the intertwined relationship between text and image that have been used both together and separately to inform and reflect the societies in which they were used.
